

Alex Price

It's always been my passion to help people and bring positive change, and now I am fortunate enough to have found a career where I get to do this daily. The world of recruiting can be incredibly difficult and stressful like any other career; however, at the end of the day, my job is simply to place hard working people in new careers. This then helps the individual provide better for their family, and helps an organization grow, which has a direct effect on the community. Coming from a sales and customer service background, I am thrilled to have found a position where I can utilize my skillset to effectively create change which was the goal to begin with.
